Like the Union Pacific "Heritage" locomotive series, "George Bush #4141" is an EMD SD70ACe and is only the sixth locomotive that the UP has ever granted a special paint scheme,

George Bush 4141 is painted in sweeping lines and adorned with the American Flag in a manner that replicates the paint scheme and tail design of Air Force One.

The "George Bush #4141", named after the 41st president of the United States, George Herbert Walker Bush, is a specially painted UP locomotive made to commemorate the opening of the "Trains: Tracks of the Iron Horse" exhibit at the George HW Bush Presidential Library and Museum in Texas.

the George Bush 4141 locomotive is used in regular service and can be seen operating all across the country, pulling freight and intermodal containers in service of the Union Pacific.

The Kato N EMD SD70ACe George Bush 4141 is at home pulling intermodal freight and is ideally suited to running with other UP SD70ACe's, pulling a variety of MAXI well cars.
